Forecast for Wednesday 21 Jun 2023

Weather: A dry and bright early morning with sunny spells. Showers will soon develop this morning, mainly light at first but by lunchtime a few heavier showers are likely. The heavier showers are more likely across eastern ranges around Loch Muick and the Angus Glens rhis afternoon with ranges west of the A9 more likely to dodge the worst of the showers. Showers tending to die out during the evening to leave clear spells and some late sunshine.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 90%, patchy lower cloud developing around heavier showers.

Low Cloud and visibility: Perhaps some early morning mist or isolated fog patches but otherwise cloud bases are expected to be above the summits but may lower to around 600m in heavier showers in the afternoon. Likewise the good visibility is likely to deteriorate during the afternoon around showers, perhaps poor for a time in a heavy shower.
